Read the passage intently and choose the most appropriate option to fill in each blank: To regard competitive examinations as neutral arbiters of merit is to mistake calibration for fairness. These trials, draped in metrics and flanked by syllabi, often merely echo the (1) _____ of systemic inequities rather than resolving them. What appears to be an open arena is, upon closer scrutiny, a scaffolded labyrinth—its paths more navigable to the already initiated. In this theatre, memory masquerades as intellect, and swiftness is crowned over (2) _____. Coaching bazaars thrive, not on illumination but on algorithmic mimicry. One does not so much learn as rehearse patterned responses, choreographed to match opaque rubrics. That which resists formula—intuition, ambiguity, ethical judgment—is too often filtered out as noise. Yet the deeper toll is not pedagogical but psychic. Prolonged exposure to anticipatory failure creates a cognitive sediment, an internalized narrowing. Dreams don't shatter; they (3) _____, calcifying into compliance. In time, the examinee becomes fluent in performance, but foreign to inquiry. To call for reform is insufficient. We must interrogate the architecture itself—its values, its exclusions, its gods. Until the grammar of merit is (4) _____, not rebranded, no revision will suffice. The danger is not that we aim too high, but that the scaffolding remains unseen, and the climb is mistaken for (5) _____. What should come in the place of blank number (1)?
	legacies
	ruptures
	inversions
	echoes
